

Risk Communication and Terrorism:

New Clinical Approaches

Special Conference Events: The horrific events of September 11th 2001 have forever changed the way American communities view national security and war. As health care professionals, we must respond to the short and long term medical and psychosocial sequelae of terrorism and the New War. The conference aim is to explore new and innovative approaches to risk communication and terrorism. However, as we move towards the future, we should recognize the past.
